AIM TO ACHIEVE 50% DOMESTIC VALUE IN EV SECTOR

New EV policy soon, to offer investment sops

To protect auto industry, consumer benefits unlikely

MUKESH JAGOTA & ROHIT VAID New Delhi, November 11

THE CENTRE IS considering a new policy for electric vehicles (EVs) that will incentivise manufacturers, including foreign original equipment manufacturers (OEMs) looking to set up base in India, as part of a comprehensive policy for the sunrise sector, said official sources.

While the government currently runs different schemes for EV promotion, including the FAME and PLI schemes, the proposed policy will differ from these as it will roll out direct incentives linked to quantum of investments rather than offer consumer subsidies, sources said. The policy would aim at increasing the domestic value addition in EV ecosystem to at least 50%, and seeks to expedite adoption of EVs in the country.

eligible for incentives and the nature of the incentives. The intent is to encourage investments in the entire supply chains, rather than just assembly operations.

Among existing schemes for the sector, the Faster Adoption and Manufacturing of Electric Vehicles in India (FAME) Scheme provides financial incentives to both EV manufacturers and buyers. The scheme will run till 2024 with a total budget of $1.3 billion.

Whether the FAME scheme gets extended with some tweaks or is replaced with a new policy is being considered. Past data and future projections for the auto sector are being examined and a study is underway to determine the impact such a policy will have on existing auto manufacturers.

While promoting the EV sector, the government does not want to disturb the existing ecosystem of automobile manufacturing in the country that has built up over the years. It would, therefore, be holding consultations with automobile and component manufacturers before finalising any EVspecific policy.

Market share gains tough for carmakers

VIKRAM CHAUDHARY New Delhi, November 11

MARUTI SUZUKI HAS never been so busy. It has launched 10 models in less than two years, but despite this model onslaught of which four are SUVs—the carmaker's market share hasn't changed much.

The company ended the January-October 2023 period with 42.3% market share, having sold 1,468,792 cars in a total market of 3,476,082 units. This isn't very different from the 41.8% share it had in the same period last year (when it sold 1,331,620 cars in a total market of 3,187,340 units).

However, according to analysts, the 0.5 percentage point gain the carmaker has recorded is substantial, considering the intense competition and little room for growth. "Competition has been intense. From January-October 2022 to the same period in 2023, carmakers like Toyota Kirloskar Motor have Continued on Page 2

4.3% to 5.3%, and Mahindra from 8.7% to 10.3%," an analyst said. "Maruti Suzuki and these two carmakers have grown at the cost of Tata Motors (whose market share reduced from 13.8% to 13.3%), Kia India (which went from 6.8% to 6.3%), and smaller players."

US TREASURY SECRETARY Janet Yellen has warned China to crack down on Chinese companies that give material support to Russia for its war in Ukraine. Yellen emphasised that the US has no desire to decouple its economy from China, but wanted a level playing field for US companies and workers.

Yellen said that the Treasury has seen evidence that Chinese companies and banks may be aiding in the flow of equipment for use in Russia's war in Ukraine despite Western sanctions, and warned Chinese Vice Premier He Lifeng that these firms"will face significant consequences" if they do.

CSR funding getting pro-climate, one small step at a time

VAISHALI DAR

New Delhi, November 11

LONG FOCUSED ON health, sanitation and education, corporate social responsibility (CSR) spending is now taking a serious turn toward environment protection.

As per segregated (provisional) data by the ministry of corporate affairs (MCA), spending on health stood at ₹9,987 crore in FY22, against ₹8,382 crore on education. Environment was at ₹2,837 crore in FY22, more than double from ₹1,337 crore in FY21.

Forinstance, Schneider Electric India Foundation, a CSR initiative of Schneider Electric, focuses on education, employment, entrepreneurship, electrification, environment, and emergency—all aimed at addressing the imminent climate crisis. "We focus on skill development to enhance employment opportunities for the youth aligned with industry demands. We have established digital classrooms powered by renewable energy sources in schools across various states. In our'Clean Energy for Sustainable Livelihood' project, we've helped 10,000 indigenous farming families secure reliable irrigation using solar-powered pumps. This enabled them to cultivate two to three crops annually, resulting in doubled incomes for female smallholder farmers and strengthening food security," said Venkat Garimella, VP—Sustainability, Greater India Zone, Schneider Electric.

For Voltas, total CSR expenditure for FY 22-23 is ₹14.60 cr as compared to ₹12.60 cr in FY 21-22, across three verticals: sustainable livelihood, community development and issues of national importance. Polycab India has an annual CSR expenditure for FY23 at ₹229 million as compared to ₹192 million in FY21-22 with major focus areas like healthcare (44%), environment (26%), education & skill development (12%), rural development (5%), etc.

McCain Foods India's CSR initiatives have adapted to emerging global and local needs on education, skill development, entrepreneurship, and sustainability. "We prioritise impactful projects," said Saranya Pradhan, head—sustainability & corporate communications— McCain Foods India.

"Many businesses have started giving more than the government-mandated 2%, which has helped fuel this surge further, with BSE 200 compa nies contributing an additional ₹1,200 crore over the 2% mandate in FY 2022. While CSR grew at a slower pace in FY22, we expect it to sustain its historical growth and reach $6.4 billion (₹52,000 crore) by FY27," said Neera Nundy, co-founder and partner, Dasra, a strategic philanthropy foundation. While Nundy said there is a need for India to ramp up climate investment, she estimates that India needs over $1.5 trillion in climate invest ments between 2020 and 2030 across sectors like transport, energy, sustainable agriculture, waste management and city resilience to minimise the impacts of climate change.

Biden and Xi meet next week: No detail too small to sweat

This will be Xi's first trip to the United States in six years

ASSOCIATED PRESS Washington, November 11

WHEN PRESIDENT JOE Biden meets Chinese leader Xi Jinping on Wednesday, there will be no such thing as a small detail. How they greet? If they eat? Where they sit? Will there be flowers? Bottled water or in a glass? "Pretty intense," senior administration officials say of navigating delicate protocols.

Anyencounterinvolvingthe president and a foreign leader means managing tricky logistics, political and cultural, and every occurrence or utterance can potentially jolt the world order. But few nations are more attuned to etiquette than the Chinese, and Washington and Beijing's often-conflicting interests might mean the seemingly trivial becomes meaningful.

There's probably "very detailed planning of the actual choreography of who enters a room where, if there will be pictures taken and all of that," said Bonny Lin, senior fellow for Asian security and director of the China Power Project at the Center for Strategic and International Studies. Biden and Xi will meet while both attend next week's Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation summit in San Francisco, but even basic information has remained closely guarded. Statements by China's preter access? Then there is the more obviously substantive: whether there will be a postmeeting joint statement and how much of the session will be in public view. The plan is to set aside enough time for in-depth conversations on issues that will be divided into different sessions, senior administration officials say. That recalls Biden's nearlythree-hourmeetingwith Xi before the start of last year's G-20 summit in Bali. The officials also noted that this will be Xi's first trip to the US in six years, and his first to San Fran-

Victor Cha, former Director for Asian Affairs on the White House's National Security Council, said organising such meetings at APEC is easier than at a formal location. But, he said, hammering out talks on summit sidelines is still "a logistics nightmare.""China, normally, if they come to United States, they want everything. They want all the pomp and circumstance. They want the highest possible respect that can be paid to them," Cha said. "That is politically not possible. And so, having APEC in San Francisco solves that problem in the sense that it's not the official White House that's hosting the meeting."

Investment sops key to new EV policy on cards

The idea is not to favour one segment over the other, the sources said. Like any policy that seeks to build up new capabilities and capacities, the proposed successor to FAME would have incentives to enable research and development, new technologies and economies of scale. Apart from FAME, the Phased Manufacturing Programme (PMP) of the government aims to promote the localisation of EV production in India. The PMP has different timelines for different components of EVs, with the aim of making India cisco since he was a provincial self-sufficient in EV production by 2030.

The Production Linked Incentive (PLI) Scheme for Automotive Sector has an outlay of $3.1 billion and provides incentives to manufacturers of advanced automotive technology (AAT) products, including EVs. Another PLI for advanced chemistry cell (ACC) battery storage provides incentives to manufacturers of ACC batteries, which are a key component of EVs. The scheme has a budgetary outlay of $2.1 billion. Though PLI for batteries is yet to take off, the Indian EV manufacturing sector is growing rapidly. In 2022-23, India produced over 450,000 EVs, up from 230,000 lakh in the previous year.

The Economic Survey 2023 predicts that India's domestic electric vehicle market will see a 49% compound annual growth rate (CAGR) between 2022 and 2030, with annual sales of 10 million by 2030.

Market share gains tough for carmakers

But launching four new SUVs - new Brezza, Grand Vitara, Fronx and Jimny – has made Maruti Suzuki a significant SUV player, and within SUVs, its market share has almost doubled – from about 12% in January-October 2022 to about 23% in January-October 2023. Armed with Fronx - the Balenobased mini-SUV – and rising sales of the new Brezza, its sub-4 metre SUV sales grew substantially. Shashank Srivastava, senior executive officer, marketing & sales, Maruti Suzuki India, told FE that a late full-fledged entry into the SUV space did lead to some market share loss, but the carmaker has more than made up for it by launching SUVs across segments in quick succession.

The 10 models the carmaker has launched post-Covid-19 are the new Celerio (November 2021), six models in 2022 – new Baleno (February), new Ertiga and XL6 (April), new Brezza (June), new Alto (August) and Grand Vitara (September) – and three so far this year (Fronx, Jimny and Invicto). During January-October 2023, while the overall passenger vehicle market grew 9.1%(from 3,187,340 units to 3,476,082 units), Maruti Suzuki sales grew 10.3% (from 1,331,620 units to 1,468,792 grew more than industry are TKM (32.5% Mahindra (29.6%) and Hyundai (9.5%). Citroen grew a whopping 92.6%, but on a very low base (from 4,309 cars to 8,301 cars).

CSR funding getting pro-climate, one small step at a time

Even World Bank president Ajay Banga had stressed recently during the G20 meet how private capital and CSR funds need to provide debt relief to lowincome countries and to fight climate change. The India Philanthropy Report 2022 in association with Bain & Company and Dasra reports CSR spending on the social sector has seen a robust annual growth rate of 13% over the past five years. Currently it stands at over ₹27,000 crore in FY22. Fund allocation towards environment, sustainability witnessed a surge of 54% from FY21 to FY22, underscoring the growing importance of these critical causes in the CSR landscape. While CSR in India has witnessed substantial growth in spending, critical funding gaps and disparities persist. The MCA has flagged the limited impact of CSR initiatives, highlighting the need to enhance their effectiveness and visibility."A prominent issue is the stark regional disparity in the allocation of CSR funds. During FY21, states like Maharashtra, Gujarat, Karnataka, and Andhra Pradesh secured a significant portion of CSR funds, while north-eastern states received only a fraction, shared Shloka Nath, CEO, India Climate Collaborative (ICC), a units). Other carmakers that collective dedicated to accelerating climate action. ICC recently announced the launch of Earth Exponential, a platform aimed at addressing critical funding gaps for India's homegrown climate solutions, supported by JSW Foundation.

IT firms face challenges in adopting Gen Al solutions

Retail, mfg sectors are at the forefront of Gen AI adoption

SAMEER RANJAN BAKSHI Bengaluru, November 11

WHILE GENERATIVE AI (artificial intelligence) might open up more discretionary spends and revenue for IT industry, two recent research reports highlight the barriers IT companies face in successfully building Gen AI solutions for enterprises. From data quality, lack of talent and privacy concerns to precise identification of suitable use cases and regulatory barriers, business leaders are weighing all these factors before adopting Gen AI solutions.

Data is the basic raw material for building Generative AI models. However, enterprises are concerned about the quality of data collected and gathered that can pose huge challenge to build effective Gen AI solutions.

An Infosys research mentions that almost half of all respondents cited data challenges — either privacy and security, or usability — as their biggest obstacle to generative AI implementation. It added, "Hallucination and intellectual property infringement are significant inherent risks in using generative AI that relies on public data. For that reason, many businesses look to build organisation-specific tools trained on corporate rather than public data." Hallucination is fabricating of information or giving output of inaccurate information.

Another report from LTI-Mindtree added that 78% of respondents in UK and Continental Europe cited data quality or availability issues as the primary barrier to Gen AI adoption. The report high-

Deepfake video: Delhi Police asks Meta for URL

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA New Delhi, November 11

THE DELHI POLICE has written to Meta to provide the URL of the account from which the 'deepfake' video of actress Rashmika Mandanna was shared on social media, officials said on Saturday.

The move came a day after the city police filed an FIR in connection with the incident.

Deepfake videos are synthetic media in which a person in an existing image or video is replaced with someone else's likeness.

Hemant Tiwari, DCP of the Intelligence Fusion and Strategic Operations (IFSO) unit, said the Delhi Police has also sought the information about the people who shared the fake video on social media.

"We have written to Meta to access the URL ID of the account from which the video was generated. We have also started doing technical analysis," the Deputy Commissioner of Police said in a statement.

An FIR in the matter was registered under sections 465 (forgery) and 469 (forgery for purpose of harming reputation) of the Indian Penal Code and sections 66C and 66E of the Information Technology Act at the IFSO unit of the Delhi Police's Special Cell after a complaint was received from Delhi Commission for Women (DCW), after the Commission took suomoto cognisance of the deepfake video of the Indian actress. The official said a dedicated team of officers has been constituted to crack the case. "We are expecting the case will be cracked soon." Madanna's deepfake video, which was suspected to be made with the help of Artificial Intelligence, went viral on social media last week. The original video was stated to be of a British-Indian influencer, whose face had been edited with Mandaimerschadeexp.epapr.in

How a city is planned will decide future impact of climate change

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA New Delhi, November 11

HOW A CITY is laid out, called urban land pattern, may help in reducing population exposure to future weather extremes, scientists in the US have found. The design of urban landscape how buildings are spread out, clustered or dispersed — and how it fits into the surrounding environment, seems to matter more than simply the size of a city, the researchers from the universities from Delaware and Wyoming have found.

The researchers investigated how changes in urban land and population will affect future populations' exposures to weather extremes under climate conditions at the end of the 21st century. "Regardless of the size of a city, well planned urban land patterns can reduce population exposures to weather extremes," said researcher Jing Gao, an assistant professor at the College of Earth, Ocean and Environment in Delaware.

The researchers said that the

and practitioners to reconsider

how cities are designed and risks. These findings differ from current common perceptions.

in this area has almost exclusively focused on limiting the amount of urban land development, Gao said. For the study, the researchers

For example, existing literature looked at urban areas across the continental US, including cities large and small, with various development densities and in different climate regions.

Then, they predicted how the urban areas will grow by 2100 on the basis of development data of the past 40 years.

The team analysed how these urban land changes might affect weather extremes, such as heat and cold waves, heavy rainfall and severe thunderstorms and the number of people potentially exposed to these events at the end of the century undervaried climate and urban development conditions.

The Man Who Broke Capitalism

David Gelles Simon & Schuster Pp 288, ₹699

MADAN SABNAVIS

HE VIDEO CLIP of the now infamous Zoom meeting where the boss abuses his team for not meeting targets is now a template used to show how capitalism has degenerated and become toxic in terms of work culture. What matters most is profit and nothing else. The end, which is seeing the company price going up, is important and the means not really that relevant.

The genesis of this behaviour goes back decades back in the 1980s when Jack Welch, then chairman and CEO of General Electric, became an icon for a different work style. What was important was shareholder value which could be driven up by making higher profits at any cost. Welch understood this and was quite unabashed about this goal; and the means used to attain it were not relevant. This is the core of the book written by David Gelles, titled The Man Who Broke Capitalism.

Welch was the most revered corporate head who knew 'how to kick' to get the desired results. There was no case of emotion coming in the way and it was only performance that mattered. The Friedman theory of markets was embraced by the government; and presidents like Ronald Regan were a true believer in this ethic.

There was a three-point formula assiduously pursued which not just won plaudits to begin with but also became examples for others to follow. He had become a role model. The first was downsizing; and he brought into American capitalism the concept of retrenchment in the name of fostering efficiency. This held not just for GE, which was an electrical company that provided products for the households, but the several other companies that he acquired through takeovers or mergers. The starting point of such ventures was large-scale ruthless layoffs. The shareholders did not mind as profits rose as did the share prices.

The justification was that if profits had to increase, costs had to be curtailed along with growing sales; and this meant cutting down on the labour force. The concept of outsourcing caught on where jobs hitherto done in the company were given to

Jack Welch was the most revered corporate head who knew 'how to kick' to get the desired results, writes the author

Profit & performance

The story of former GE CEO Jack Welch is a grim reminder for many corporates taking a similar direction today outsiders. This fell in well with the tenets of capitalism where there had to be creative destruction along the way. This model may sound familiar in India even today where several companies think nothing amiss about terminating services of labour based on the efficiency argument. Welch became a hero and for those who worked in the Eighties, Nineties and first decade of the 21st century. Almost every CEO loved to display his book, Straight from the Gut, on their shelves.

His behaviour was outright abusive and one had to fall in line to survive in the company. Employees were too scared to walk close to him as they expected him to be nasty. Whenever he lost his temper at anyone he would say: shoot him, which meant getting the sack. He had become such an icon that the media loved him and with all the interviews on TV channels and columns in magazines, he became a role model for success. In fact, buying a company that ran the NBC channel helped in this image building. This was American capitalism at its macho best.

The second was deal making, which was part of the package. The number of deals of buyouts and sales reckoned in this two decades of rule was amazing and each deal spelt trouble for the staff as the Welch paradigm was adopted. Once deals were done they would be headed by anyone he liked.

The third was financialisation, which meant making profit at any cost. This did not preclude braking laws and fudging numbers. It did not matter as long as it was not found out as every quarter mattered when it came to convincing shareholders that things were just too good. And as he delivered returns exponentially, everything worked in his favour.

The book goes into details of how companies were run under his aegis and the absolute power wielded by him. The unions were made non-existent and cultural centres turned into fancy clubs meant for elite groups. The performance-driven culture meant that those who did very well prospered and the infamous Bell curve which meant sacking employees every year took shape under his regime. Corporate America just loved it as it spoke a tough language of success. His close colleagues, including Immelt who took over the reins after Welch moved out, continued on the same path to maintain continuity. Fortune wrote that when any company was looking for a CEO they would poach on the stalwarts of GE.

Gelles does lament this extreme state of capitalism not just because of the human factor but also the use of immoral techniques to keep the accounts looking very good. He also points out that nothing much has changed as seen even in recent times when Microsoft and Meta have laid off a large number of workers. Elon Musk has now earned the title of Neutron Mush which was first given to Welch, as he resorted to sacking 50% of Twitter staff after taking over the company.

BLOOMBERG

The reader would have to take a call on whether she admires this kind of culture or not. To the normal person this sounds repugnant, but such a model has made many shareholders richer and happy. He changed the way in which companies are run. It is no longer a case of preserving family values, but working as a team all the time. Companies are now moving away from such extremism, but as seen in India, too, the culture of Welch has already gotten ingrained and one needs to look through the windows to smell this.

with social ills such as female infanticide, slavery, elitism, etc. "Early verses," Alkhateeb writes, "also denounced social ills that were prevalent in Mecca. With increasing prosperity from the trade routes, distinct social classes developed. The wealthy would use their money to fund more caravans that would in turn bring them more wealth.Apoor person, meanwhile, continued to be marginalized, doubly so if they did not belong to a powerful clan. The Ouran declared such disregard for the poor as detrimental to the establishment of a just social order, and worthy of punishment in the Hereafter."

Equality is of paramount importance in Islam and the religious movement that began in Meccawas initially supported by early Muslims belonging to branches of Quraysh who were considered inferior, and opposed vehemently by the ruling elites, as new beliefs were a threat to their social and economic positions.

Alkhateeb argues by presenting facts and several instances that religious freedom guaranteed to non-Muslim population of Medina in the constitution of Medina by the Prophet was enshrined by Muslim rulers in their governance for centuries. Even when the Umayyads under the leadership of teenager Muhammad

Firas Alkhateeb has done well to shed light on the values of Islam that truly

A brief account of Islam's journey from Arabia to the world

bin Qasim captured Sindh with the aid of Buddhist temple officials in response to native ruler Raja Dahir's unwillingness to release Arab captives, after a Muslim vessel was intercepted by local pirates, religious freedom was guaranteed to Hindus and Buddhists living there. "On the advice of his superiors in Iraq, Ibn Qasim extended the same religious freedom to Buddhists and Hindus that was already given to Christians and Jews elsewhere in the Muslim world. Temples and idols destroyed in the fighting were allowed to be rebuilt by the new Muslim governors. Once again, the relaxed terms offered by the conquering Muslims created little discontent with Muslim rule and relative social harmony," Alkhateeb notes.

The book charts out how the centuriesold knowledge of prominent Islamic scholars, scientists, astronomers and mathematicians shaped the European intellectual life after the Renaissance as their works were translated into European languages. The capital of Abbasids in Baghdad, which housed the famed House of Wisdom and Al-Andalus, served as centres of knowledge and wisdom for not just the Muslim civilisation but also for the West. "Using trigonometry and spherical geometry they calculated that earth is 12,728 kilometers in diameter—they were off by a mere 37 kilometers. Furthermore, they calculated the earth's circumference to be 39,968 kilometers, when in actuality it is 40,074 kilometers. Without modern satellites and telescopes, these calculations can only be described as astounding,"Alkhateeb writes.

After the period of expansion, Muslim civilisation began reshaping scientific history through innovation and discoveries that were ahead of their time. Even the minds, the Muslim world had fallen so far behind precisely because it was so focussed on religion and bringing back the glory days of early Islamic history, instead of modernising according to new ideas and philosophies," Alkhateeb writes. These approaches continue to affect the way Muslims think today, according to the author. During the occupation of the Arab world, Asia and the Indian subcontinent by European powers, indigenous cultures and ideas were "associated with backwardness and impotence". The former prestige and greatness of Muslim civilisation dissipated, with the masses quickly adapting to Western culture, ideas and political systems.

The book is not without failings, as can be expected when a subject as vast as Islamic history is dealt with in 250-odd pages. This is also why it is a great work of research. There is very little on how the Middle East came under the influence of the West, and began adopting Western forms in the organisation and expression of its political and social life to a certain extent, although a lot of emphasis has been given to westernisation of the Ottoman empire.

All in all, this a great book for anyone interested in the study of Islamic history. The scholarship of the author shines through the pages, despite some missing points. Alkhateeb has done well to shed light on the values of Islam that truly define the faith.

Riding on hot air

It's the season of balloon rides, and even Uber offers one now

VAISHALI DAR

N AN AGE of speed, Uber has announced a leisurely ride — on a hot balloon — in Cappadocia, Turkey. Starting this week, Uber Balloon is available at the UNESCO World Heritage Göreme National Park, and riders can book directly on the app via Uber Reserve.

The trips depart from Göreme, Cappadocia, taking riders on a 1.5-hour picturesque flight through the park, known for 'fairy chimneys' and grand architecture carved into the limestone. On an early liftoff, riders will be able to see stunning views of dawn from 3,000 feet in the air.

This unique adventure ride includes door-to-door rides from the hotel lobby to 3,000 feet in the sky. Balloon trips will cost €150 per person.

Not just balloon rides but the travel app will soon launch other travel experiences like Uber Boat in Mykonos and Uber Sleigh in Lapland.

Every year, the tradition of flying high in the sky continues with hundreds of hot air balloons at festivals around the world. The Albuquerque International Balloon Fiesta is a yearly hot air balloon festival that takes place in Albuquerque, New Mexico, during early October. From a small gathering of 13 balloons in 1972, Fiesta has grown to become the largest balloon event in the world. Held each year during the first week in October, the Balloon Fiesta now features about 600 balloons and 700 pilots.

The festival is visually appealing as it covers professional hot air balloon competitions and unique balloons shaped like animals and popular cartoon characters.

The Spooktacular Hot Air Balloon festival in October in Scottsdale, a desert city in Arizona, is known to host over 20 hot air balloons from around the country as part of the Halloween festivities.

In Reno, Nevada, the Great Reno Balloon Race held at Rancho San Rafael Regional Park has over 100 balloons and participation from over 1,50,000 spectators on average each year.

While Uber in India is not planning a similar kind of experience any time soon, but India organises many such rides and festivals across places such as

In fact, the state tourism department and Varanasi Development Authority have signed an MoU to boost tourism in Varanasi by developing a 'tent city' and offering hot air balloon rides and water sports activities this year.

The Taj Mahal in Agra recently held a hot air balloon ride at ShilpGram, a cultural hub near Taj Mahal, for select days which was part of the Taj Carnival, a cultural festival that will continue till November 25. The 10-minute hot air balloon ride was ticketed at ₹500 per person.

TECH-NOW-LOGY

How & why GenZs get tech-shamed at work

As per a survey, one in five young workers feel judged when they face any technical difficulties at the workplace, compared to one in 25 older workers

SHUBHANGI SHAH

HE GENZS ARE a techsavvy lot. Or, are they just assumed to be smart at tech? Well, they have spent much of their lives online. They literally grew up with a smartphone, swiping up and down, jumping effortlessly from one app to the next, editing pictures and making videos, as if everything is a cakewalk. This can make them appear as tech-efficient.

While the GenZs can be incredibly efficient at what is seen as the newer technology, workplaces do not work on apps, photo editors and social media platforms. They are more about desktops, printers, scanners, and landline telephones — technology that can feel antiquated otherwise, but intrinsic to the modern workplaces, still. And GenZs are facing challenges in using this, and they are being shamed for it to the extent that tech company Hewlett Packard (HP) has come up with a term — 'tech shaming'.

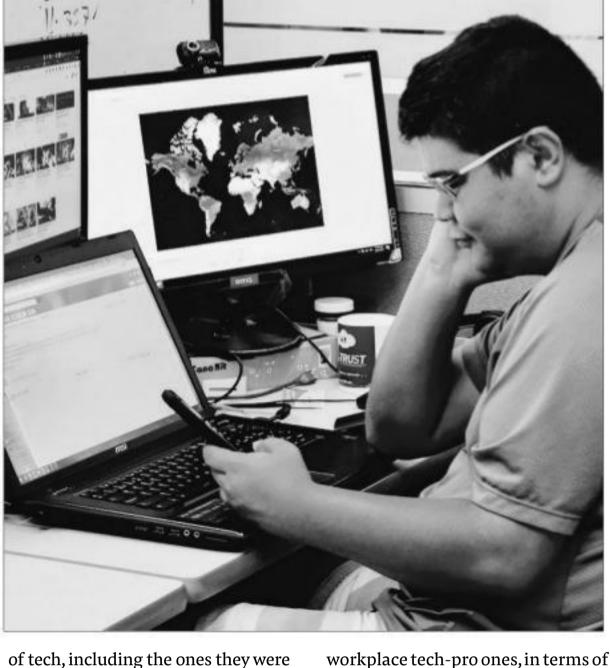

The term loosely describes how overwhelmed the young workers feel in using these office tools, and the subsequent scrutiny they might be subjected to. According to a survey by HP, one in five young workers feel judged when they face THE any technical difficulties TERM LOOSELY at the workplace,

compared to one in 25

older workers. This YOUNG WORKERS FEEL clearly indicates that IN USING OFFICE TOOLS tech-shaming, which AND SCRUTINY THEY is associated with the MIGHT BE feeling of embarrass-SUBJECTED TO ment or inadequacy, affects the GenZs more compared to their boomer counterparts. In another survey by LaSalle Agency, an employment agency, almost half of the class of 2022 reported feeling 'underprepared' when it came to the technical skills required at a workplace. Behind age-shaming, age bias can be seen at play. Since GenZs are assumed to be good at tech, they are often thought to be good at all kinds of tech, including the ones they were not trained at or grew up with - fax machines, copiers, scanners, desktop computers, etc. Not just that, they might even be expected to help their older colleagues out. However, struggling with devices that are often seen as basic can result in tech-shaming, which, in turn, can cause a feeling of inadequacy.

Much impact

Tech-shaming, at the outset, can come off as harmless. However, several reports indicate that it can be more damaging than it is thought to be. The shaming, and the subsequent sense of embarrass-DESCRIBES HOW ment, can make it dif-OVERWHELMED THE ficult for the workers to reach out when in need of help. This not only pulls them back when it comes to their skill set but can also impact overall productivity.

It can impact their self-esteem and in the worst case scenario, can even result in a toxic workplace scenario, where workers are not encouraged enough to open up and seek help. Not just that, it can further have impact on the team, in general, further affecting the overall work. And since most modern workplaces are much tech-driven, it can lead to unnecessary advantage for some, the visibility and productivity; which might have an impact on others.

Better prevent and manage Clearly, tech-shaming is damaging for both the individuals and the employer. Hence, it is crucial to take steps to prevent it from happening and address it if it happens.

Firstly, training at the basic office tools can help. After figuring out what the employers might be struggling with, a question-and-answer session can easily address much of the issues. Also, it is crucial to foster an open culture where issues and challenges can be discussed and addressed liberally without any scrutiny. Equally important is to bridge the tech divide between older and younger workers. One just need to factor in that just like the former might need training with understanding how the modern tools work, the latter might struggle with the older ones, and a middle ground can benefit everyone. Lastly, it is important to use updated technology, which is much easier to use for everyone. Also, it is crucial to address the age bias and understand that not all boomers are out-of-touch with technology, and not all GenZs are pro at every piece of tech. They just need assistance with the what they haven't grown up with.

Diwali & fireworks

There is no evidence of linkage between Diwali celebrations and fireworks

A painting shows the palace grounds of Farhat Baksh (abode of Nawab Saadat Ali Khan, governor of Awadh under Emperor Muhammad Shah) lit by coloured lamps and with fireworks BRITISH LIBRARY

A 17th century miniature shows celebrations in the ladies section of a Mughal fort, with fireworks in the background with an amusement unknown in Europe — a combat between two elephants; which takes place in the presence of all the people on the sandy space near the river: the King, the principal ladies of the court, and the Omrahs viewing the spectacle from different apartments in the fortress." The animals during these fights were separated only when fireworks were exploded between them. Being "naturally timid" and fearful of fire, Bernier points out, "is the reason why elephants have been used with so very little advantage in armies since the use of fire-arms".

The fireworks in Delhi on the Muslim festival of Shab-e-Baraat, which falls before the holy month of Ramzan, began much before the Mughals moved their capital from Agra to the city. In 1258, the first celebratory fireworks were recorded when Mumluk Sultan Nasiruddin Mahmud Shah welcomed envoys of Mongol ruler

Hulagu Khan to his capital. According to medieval historian

FREER GALLERY OF ART

Firishta's Tarikh-i-Firishta, 300 cartloads of fireworks were put to use on the occasion. The evidence of display of fireworks on Shab-e-Baraat was also recorded during the reign of Tughlaq dynasty's Sultan Feroz Shah who had established his capital near the present day old city of Delhi, where his dilapidated fort still stands.

Fireworks on Shab-e-Baraat remained constant during the Mughal days and they became an essential part of elaborate Diwali celebrations at the Red Fort. On Diwalinights, Red Fort's burjs were all decorated with oil lamps and the emperor watched the night's festivities from his burj. During the day, as was an old Mughal tradition for birthday celebrations, emperors were weighed against gold and silver, for distribution among the poor. Fireworks were a great source of Mughal amusement back in the day and an essential part of celebratory occasions. Celebratory cannons were also fired on different occasions. The Ram Leela processions that still hold charm in Old Delhi, were started in the city by the Mughals.

The festival of light and fireworks have no linkage if one goes by how the festival was celebrated centuries ago. The tradition of celebratory fireworks on Diwali, according to historians, began only in post-colonial India. A display of celebratory fireworks has become a part of composite culture of India, which has gotten in its present shape due to a fine mingling of different cultures and religions. With the thick cover of dangerous smog enveloping different India cities in its choking haze every year at the onset of winter, it is quite appropriate to weigh the question whether the tradition of celebratory fireworks on Diwali should be abandoned for good in the best interest of everyone.

Medical practitioners are divided over the imperatives of animal vis-a-vis plant protein. Here's what works best for you about the significance of including protein in our diet. While protein provides us with the much-needed energy, it is also important for the growth and development in children, teens and pregnant women. One of the most important components of the human diet, protein also supports lean mass growth, which is associated with desirable health outcomes and reduced mortality risks.

The protein in food is broken down into parts called amino acids during digestion. The quality and digestibility of these amino acids depend upon protein sources, which can be either animal-based or plant-based.

Now, this is where a debate has been raging on for decades—is animal protein better than plant protein, or vice versa?

"In terms of quality, animal protein is A-class if we compare it with plant protein, which has a reduced content of essential amino acids (EAAs). A significant reduction of limiting amino acids (methionine, lysine, tryptophan) means lower protein synthesis. But if we use mutual supplementation and choose sensibly, we can strike a balance," says Dr Priyanka Rohatgi, chief clinical dietician at Apollo Hospitals, Bengaluru.

The superiority debate has the world of medical science divided with opinions ranging from animal protein aggravating kidney issues to plant-based diets providing adequate amounts of the essential nutrient. "For young and middle-aged people with active lifestyles, a well-balanced plant-based diet can provide sufficient protein, as long as it includes a variety of protein sources. For older individuals, animal protein is often rated higher due to their amino acid profile and ease of digestion, which can be beneficial as age-related issues may affect nutrient absorption," adds Dr Rohatgi.

Experts suggest it is possible for one to optimise plant-based diets but that requires eating more to get the desired quantity of protein. In reality, it is much easier to accomplish if one sticks to an animal-based diet. For instance, depending upon the quality of protein, each 100 gm of animal-source food gives one 25 to 30 gm of protein. To get the same amount of protein intake from plantsource food, one would have to eat quite a lot, which will also increase the intake of carbohydrates. "One can combine foods that have complementary amino acid profiles. For instance, beans and rice together provide a more complete set of essential amino acids than each food [taken] separately. One must pay attention to protein-intake quantity to ensure you're getting enough total protein in your diet to meet your daily protein needs. Some plant-based foods like plant-based milk and cereals are fortified with additional nutrients, including essential amino acids," suggests Dr Bharathi Kumar, a Bengaluru-based dietician at Fortis Hospital.

Building blocks

Proteins are made up of chemical building blocks called amino acids. Our body uses these amino acids to build, repair muscles and bones. They also aid the production of essential hormones and enzymes, in addition to acting as a source of energy. According to a recent Harvard Medical School report, "The Recommended Dietary Allowance (RDA) for protein is a modest 0.8 grams of protein per kilogram of body weight or 0.36 grams per pound. The RDA is the amount of a nutrient you need to meet your basic nutritional requirements." The same research points out that the amount of protein the body needs can vary from person to person, depending on the age and lifestyle factors. According to the same research, "For a 50-year-old woman who weighs 140 pounds and is sedentary (does not exercise), that translates into 53 grams of protein a day."

More power to protein

Several human studies and randomised controlled trials (RCT) have concluded that a higher protein diet also supports weight loss. The major cause of both diabetes and high blood pressure is obesity, which also depends on lifestyle factors. So, an active lifestyle relying on a combination of regular exercise and high-protein diet is essential for healthy living. Some grain and cereal-based products are also sources of protein, but are generally not as high in protein as meat and meat-alternative products. "Legumes (beans, lentils, chickpeas) are generally considered the best sources of protein quality among plant-based proteins because they contain a good balance of amino acids and are high in fibre, vitamins, and minerals. Animal protein like chicken, lean cuts of beef, and fish are often considered good sources for lean muscle growth due to their high protein content, amino acid profile, and low fat content. However, plant-based options like tofu and tempeh can also support muscle growth when incorporated into a balanced diet," Dr Kumar says.

Diet over diabetes?

Some studies have suggested the relative lack of EAAs in plant protein may result in the amino acids being directed towards urea synthesis. There also exists evidence that suggests people who rely on plant protein for their daily nutrition needs end up consuming less protein and more carbohydrates which can impair insulin sensitivity in some cases, especially in middle-aged and old individuals. That is because the quality of amino acids present in plants is quite low, which means an individual has to eat more for sufficient quantity of protein that also impacts digestibility.

Dieticians also recommend shifting to a plant-based diet to people who have kidney problems. "The breakdown of excess amino acids, including essential amino acids, can lead to the production of urea, which the kidneys must excrete. This is a normal metabolic process and generally not problematic in healthy individuals. However, excessive consumption of protein, whether from animal or plant sources, can strain the kidneys over time. If someone already has kidney issues, they may need to monitor their protein intake, but this is not limited to plant-based protein and can apply to high-protein diets in general," explains Dr Kumar.

While this may be true for some, medical practitioners argue that because animal protein is connected to muscle health, it should remain an essential part of the daily diet of those prone to diabetes. "Our muscle health depends upon our protein intake and our longevity depends upon our muscle health. Both are interlinked. It is better for those who are prone to diabetes or are diabetic not to derive protein solely from plants because that impacts our insulin resistance," says Dr Abdullah Saad Siddiqui, a Saudi-based functional medicine practitioner.

Dr Siddiqui opines that India is "the diabetes capital of the world" because doctors are not paying attention to this aspect of promoting plant-based diets. In fact, he believes a diet based on animal protein is safe for those in the early stages of kidney disease, and essential for diabetics. "There are no randomised controlled trials to prove that intake of animal protein can aggravate kidney problems. Unless, one is in stage four and five, of course. It is a myth—there is no science behind it," he adds.

selling point of this lab-produced protein is that it can address the impending implications caused by the global growth in demand for animal-source foods. According to a report published a few years ago in the journal Science, "Meat and dairy use 80% of the world's farmlands and are responsible for 60% of agricultural greenhouse gas emissions."

Another report published in 2019 notes, "Today's food supply chain creates 13.7 billion metric tonne of carbon dioxide equivalent (CO<sub>2</sub> eq) (26%) of anthropogenic GHG emissions. A further 2.8 billion metric tonne of CO<sub>2</sub> eq (5%) are caused by non-food agriculture and other drivers of deforestation... These emissions can fundamentally alter the species composition of natural ecosystems, reducing biodiversity and ecological resilience. The farm stage dominates, representing 61% of food's GHG emissions (81% including deforestation), 79% of acidification, and 95% of eutrophication."

It is debatable if this sustainable protein should substitute real food, even if it is for the sake of saving the environment, food security and supporting natural ecosystems. "That is not food because it is made in labs. Imagine what it will do to our health—it is a big risk people are taking and its impact will show in a few years' time. We all took these vaccines and after 2-3 years people are facing health issues. Smart proteins are not natural. Being a doctor, I would never recommend them," Dr Siddiqui adds.

Antibiotics you are popping could be ineffective

A recent study has found many common antibiotics are no longer effective

A RECENT STUDY has found that many antibiotics commonly prescribed are no longer effective in many parts of the world. Dr Rakesh Gupta, senior consultant, internal medicine, Indraprastha Apollo Hospital, throws light on what is the magnitude of antibiotic resistance in India.

"Antibiotic resistance in India is a critical and escalating concern, significantly impacting healthcare outcomes nationwide. Recent studies have illuminated the magnitude of this issue, indicating that a substantial number of commonly prescribed antibiotics have lost their efficacy in numerous regions across the country. The situation in India is exacerbated by f actors such as widespread antibiotic misuse, inadequate regulation, and limited access to healthcare in remote areas. The overuse and misuse of antibiotics, prevalent in both clinical and non-clinical settings, play a pivotal role in the emergence of resistance. This misuse includes inappropriate prescribing by healthcare providers, patient self-medication, unregulated over-the-counter

Dr Rakesh antibiotic availability, Gupta and their extensive use in the agricultural sector. Poor sanitation and hygiene in certain regions also contribute to the dissemination of resistant bacterial strains," he says. He adds that the magnitude of antibiotic resistance in India is evident across various bacterial infections, including tuberculosis, pneumonia, urinary tract infections and gastrointestinal illnesses. High rates of multi-drug resistant tuberculosis (MDR-TB) and extensively drugresistant tuberculosis (XDR-TB) further underscore the severity of the issue. "Addressing antibiotic resistance requires a multi-faceted approach encompassing enhanced antibiotic stewardship, stringent regulations, public awareness campaigns, improved healthcare infrastructure, and investment in novel antimicrobial research and development. Collaborative efforts between healthcare professionals, policymakers, and the public are crucial to combat the burgeoning threat of antibiotic resistance," he says.

Which are the antibiotics that are usually self prescribed but are found to have reduced efficacy?

The misuse and self-prescription of antibiotics pose a significant risk to public health. Several commonly self-prescribed antibiotics, such as penicillin-based drugs (eg amoxicillin), macrolides (eg azithromycin), and fluoroquinolones (eg ciprofloxacin), have shown reduced efficacy due to various factors.

Amoxicillin, a widely used penicillin antibiotic, is frequently taken without proper medical consultation for conditions like colds or flu, which are caused by viruses, not bacteria. Overuse of amoxicillin contributes to bacterial resistance, rendering it less effective in treating bacterial infections. Similarly, azithromycin, belonging to the macrolide class, is often misused for conditions it cannot treat effectively, leading to the development of resistant strains of bacteria.

Fluoroquinolones like ciprofloxacin are powerful antibiotics commonly self-prescribed for mild infections, leading to reduced effectiveness in treating severe bacterial illnesses. These antibiotics may have serious side effects and should only be used under a doctor's guidance. Self-medication and improper use not only diminish their efficacy but also foster the emergence of antibiotic-resistant bacteria. When these drugs are needed to combat serious infections, their reduced effectiveness can lead to treatment failure, prolonged illnesses, etc.

Which are the antibiotics that should not be used without prescription but are commonly sold OTC?

The accessibility of antibiotics without a prescription is a pressing issue. Several antibiotics are commonly sold over the counter (OTC), despite the critical need for a prescription due to their potential side effects, development of antibiotic resistance, and inappropriate usage. One such antibiotic is Amoxicillin, a widely used and effective antibiotic against various bacterial infections. Its availability without a prescription raises concerns regarding incorrect self-diagnosis, inadequate dosage, incomplete treatment courses, etc. Similarly, Ciprofloxacin is crucial for specific bacterial infections but has associated risks, including tendon damage and the promotion of resistant strains. Tetracycline antibiotics, including Doxycycline and Minocycline, are also occasionally available without a prescription. They are potent broad-spectrum antibiotics with the potential for adverse effects, such as tooth discolouration in children and interference with contraceptive pills. HYDERABAD

Milk is a source of livelihood. These (RCEP) countries have a surplus — New Zealand exports 95% of the total milk produced. We are not stupid that we will allow our farmers to stay hungry because they have surplus Udit Misra: Last year, we saw a substantial increase in the domestic prices of milk. Why was that? Will there be further rise in the near future?

If you look at long-term inflation of milk, vis-a-vis the general inflation in the country, milk has always been slightly below the average inflation. Last year was an aberration because the two years prior to that were COVID years when we couldn't take any price increase. During the COVID period, hotels and restaurants were closed and the private sector stopped collecting milk and cooperatives got all the milk. During shutdowns, we were operating at 130% of our capacity because we couldn't say no to the farmers. We also continued our supplies in the market through the lockdowns. There was an inventory buildup in India. We did not reduce the price of the raw materials and farmers continued to get the remunerative price for the milk. There was an overall inflation — feed, fodder cost and general inflation — but we did not pass it on to the consumers.

So, last year, when demand rebounded, you saw milk prices being increased in India, not just by Amul, but by every single player. In the past 10-12 months, there's been no increase in the prices.

Udit Misra: What is your view on the amendments in the Multi-State Cooperative Societies Act, 2002?

The government has formed a new Ministry of Cooperation, and realises that for the 1.4 billion people, 70% in rural areas — including landless and small marginal sections of the society and women — cooperatives are the best tool for development. The new Ministry has also created three new multi-state cooperatives. One is on exports, second is on organics and third is on seeds.

The Ministry of Cooperation identified the top cooperatives of the country Amul, IFFCO, KRIBHCO, NAFED, NDDB, NCDC and National Cooperative Consumers' Federation. Between the seven of us, each is incubating new multistate cooperatives.

The objective is clear — the exports one will identify the international markets for export of all the products the cooperatives make.

The structure of the primary agricultural cooperative societies is being strengthened through computerisation and support. The vision is that in every village if there is an active primary agricultural cooperative society, it will harness the collective might of all the producers of different agricultural crops. If they have a requirement for seeds, they will buy certified seeds and the seeds cooperative will give them certified seeds. The same is happening in the case of milk.

Udit Misra: If you could tell us about recent reports of conflict between Amul and Nandini in Karnataka.

Nandini and Amul are registered under the respective state governments' Cooperative Societies Act and any change in the Multi-State Act does not impact either of us. We are owned by our respective farmers and there is good cooperation between these two state federations. Since 1998, Amul ice-creams have been packed in Karnataka in the plants owned by the Karnataka Milk Federation with Nandini, and are being sold there. During COVID, when they had surplus milk, we also had surplus milk, and we bought close to 5,000 tonnes of cheese from the Karnataka Federation because they had no other revenue. The conflict is largely in the minds of a few politicians, if I may say so. More importantly, the issue was made-up and hyped. When Nandini wants to set up a new plant, they will come to us. All our facilities, recipes, products and insights are available to them free of cost. Together we have been able to grow this country to this height and keep the multinationals out.

Udit Misra: Few years ago, there was opposition to India joining the Regional Comprehensive Economic Partnership (RCEP). One of the things being said was that India doesn't want cheaper milk from New Zealand and Australia. Does Amul welcome the opening up of food milk trade? Milk is a source of livelihood. These countries have a surplus — New Zealand exports 95 % of the total milk produced. We are not stupid that we will allow our farmers to stay hungry because they have surplus. And it is not cheap milk. Anything that you think is cheap, we actually pay through the nose. Till 1995, India was self-reliant in terms of edible oil. Somebody gave this magic mantra to the then government that cheaper oil from Malaysia could help us. Look at what has happened today — we are importing 90% of our edible oil, all our oil seed cooperatives have closed, our local oil mills are under pressure and we are paying the price. So, there is nothing like cheap food. Europe, USA, Australia and New Zealand, all of them are looking for a market. We are not just the largest producer of milk in the world, but also the largest consumer. No country will deprive its farmers of their livelihood and depend on imports. Gujarat farmers are getting perhaps the same price or better price for milk than the New Zealand producers today, but our consumers are getting milk at less than half the price compared to a customer in New Zealand.

Rakesh Sinha: Now that the farmers have been pointing to the rising costs of feed and animal husbandry, how are you managing your pricing?

The nutrition of the cow is the basis on which the output and productivity happens. We manufacture close to 10,000 tonnes of cattle feed every day and this is sold at no profit-no loss business to farmers. That is still one-third of the total feed cost. We give them the high-protein stuff, but the cows also need to eat grass, dry fodder, water and so on. This is the feed part.

There is also the breed part. We have several semen stations, sorted semen technology to see that the breed and productivity of the cows improve. There are veterinary services where you can get a doctor within 30 minutes of calling, in every single village of Gujarat. These are the integrative services a cooperative provides, which keeps a farmer interested in the business.

Rakesh Sinha: Is there reluctance among the children of dairy farmers to continue in the trade?

Post COVID, people realise it's a very assured business. There is reverse migration because there is no problem in selling milk. So, people are investing in it and we are seeing the younger generation getting into it. They are interested in increasing the cattle holding size. With the economies of scale, you are able to employ labour. With automation, milking machines, and the different tools available, it is not a drudgery like it used to be. So, people are coming back into this business.

It's also our responsibility to keep the farmers interested. So, we run entrepreneurship development programmes and three-month courses where farmers can look at the successful models of how these large farms are working, and we also support them by giving bulk milkcoolers right in their farm.

PVaidyanathan Iyer: If in the next fiveseven years India will be a third of the total global market, why are we reluctant to open trade?

India is one of the most open markets for dairy in the world. You can import any brand of dairy product by paying a nominal duty of hardly 30%. For skimmed milk powder there is a TRQ (Tariff Rate Quota) in which you can import 10,000 tonne for just 15% duty. So, India is open to import. There are countries which don't even allow a single kilo of import. Still, they want access to our markets at zero duties. No country will be insensitive to the demands of its large number of producers who depend on it for their livelihood.

The US has a 50% import duty on butter, Canada has 250%, and Bangladesh has 78%. So, every country has a right to protect its market, its farmers. To demand that because we are such a big market, we should open up our country with zero% import duty, that's not acceptable.

Unni Rajen Shanker: How does the ban on cattle slaughter impact the dairy sector and the farmers?

There are certain things linked to our culture and religious beliefs, and we don't believe in cow slaughter because cows have a very elevated status in our society.

When you treat a cow as a mother, obviously there are sentiments attached. Economics is not important in this regard, but I will share our solution to this. We are now championing a circular economy. A cow gives milk for 300 days in a year, that's the lactation cycle. It gives dung every day. If we are able to pull that dung, which we've started doing, it becomes a source of biogas. That biogas can light a chulha in a village kitchen or we can purify it and run cars (compressed biogas, CBG). The slurry left behind is a bio fertiliser that can go into the field and replace chemical fertilisers.

So, farmers get an income for the gobar, and India's fuel and fertiliser imports also reduce. It is a win-win situation and we are trying to strike at that. We have set up multiple plants of micromodel to collect and store dung for local usage. We are also setting up CNG pumps. Additionally, methane can be broken down using solar energy or any other power into hydrogen.

So, a day will come when a dairy cooperative or a cooperative which handles milk in a large volume can also transform into an energy company.

Aggam Walia: Can you share Amul's experience with the PLI (Product Linked Incentive) scheme? Amul is one of the four companies to have received support for mozzarella cheese under this scheme — if you could talk about this specific segment.

The PLI scheme has been good and we have been among the largest investors in the three categories available to us. We are doubling up on our ice-cream manufacturing capacities. We are making new investments in the buttermilk and beverage segment. Mozzarella cheese is another category. The government identifies certain categories that can help > ments in the period known to you. Practically, every state has some presence of cooperatives. You also have to look at what is the share of the cooperative in the total milk production of the state. Whenever an organised player enters the market, cooperatives play the role of a catalyst. We will have an extra share. The private sector always wants to buy at the lowest price and sell the finished goods for the highest price, keeping the maximum profit for the shareholders and owners. We do exactly the opposite. We buy the raw material at the highest possible price, because we

the run-up to the polls.

will set the cat among the pigeons. At the end of the day, any farmer would welcome a new institution coming to buy products. Karnataka sells milk at a price which is much cheaper than any other state. So, who is the government subsidising? They're subsidising the consumer, it's not a subsidy to the producer.

Sukalp Sharma: Amul was a pioneer but now other state cooperatives have also started diversifying into the larger FMCG space. Do you expect any friction with other dairy cooperatives in different product categories, apart from milk.

If the cooperatives work, why shouldn't we? If they expand, leverage their brand name, why just domestic, let us go international.

India liberalised its economy in 1991 and with that came relicensing, the removal of the borders. With delicensing, what could happen is that Nestle could technically set up a plant next to Amul dairy in Anand. We, as Amul, have gone through this in a very painful way.

We are aligned to the changes that are happening and are not vulnerable to all the shocks which can happen. Every single cooperative has coped with liberalisation. We should be proud that the cooperatives have made India the largest producer of milk in the world. And we have a bonding amongst ourselves.

Kaunain Sheriff M: In the last five years, Amul has seen a significant visibility in the dark chocolate segment. How did this surge happen?

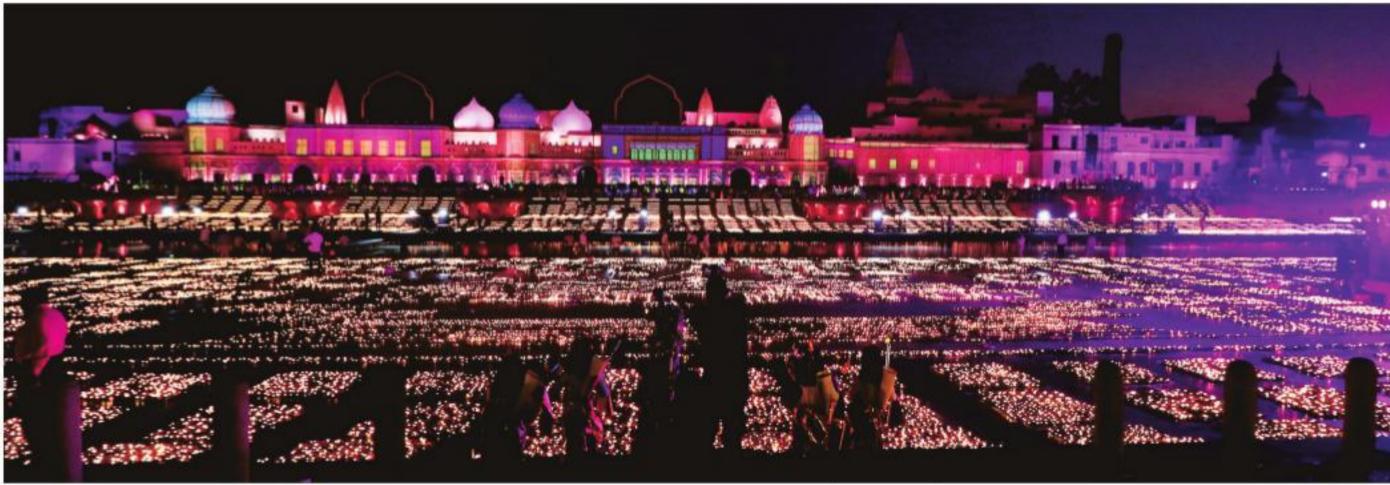

(A decade ago) we experimented with dark chocolate. The darkest dark in those days was Bournville, which was 45% dark, which they've increased to 50%. Our dark started with 55%. We entered this market with a slab of 150 gram for Rs 100, with elegant packing and zero marketing, only using the power of social media. From 2015-2016 to today, people have started talking about it, and we have implemented suggestions to do 75 dark, 90, coffee flavour or orange flavour or sugar-free. We have created a portfolio of more than 30 SKUs (stockkeeping unit) of dark chocolate. We also started getting cocoa from Peru, Venezuela, Tanzania and Colombia, and launched a 'single country' age of chocolates. Today, we are the largest manufactures of dark chocolates in the country.

Power play

Power has been important: length off the tee has always given the long-hitters an advantage

HE'S 19 YEARS old. And when Gordon Sargent teed it up at the 2023 Masters Tournament the world-at-large hadn't heard much about the teenager. Relating his experience on the Back of the Range podcast, (hosted by Ben Adelberg), Sargent says he walked into the pro shop to enquire about his tee time."I'm like, 'Look, I'm a player, I have my caddie right here? The guy's, like, 'No, you're going to have to have your badge."'

He may not have been a recognisable figure on that stage but Sargent was already a bit of a star on the US Collegiate circuit and only the second amateur to be invited by the Masters Tournament committee to come play in the Masters in this century. That changed pretty quickly. Playing his practice round with Max Homa and Justin Thomas, Sargent outdrove the PGA Tour winners by as much as 40 yards on some holes. When asked how many times he outdrove them, Homa replied, "I don't know, I stopped counting..."

Sargent comfortably generates a 185 mph ball speed with driver. Even though he's only six feet and weighs 79 kgs, Sargent is able to generate these astonishing numbers because of an exceptional 'X-Factor:' measured at the top of the backswing, when the shoulders reach their maximum rotation, X factor is defined as the difference in rotation between shoulders and hips. Amateurs average about 40 degrees, PGA Tour players, 74 degrees, and Sargent's is estimated to be at least 80 degrees. That level of separation creates an incredible amount of torque that allows the relatively lightweight Sargent to consistently drive well over 350 yards. Goes without saying that he's supremely fit. Don't try this at home folks.

On another note, Sargent's story is one that's repeated year after year, as scores of young players who join the professional ranks hit the golf ball further than ever before. You don't even have to look at an outlier like a Bryson de Chambeau, who regularly hits precision drives that go over 400 yards; even Rory McIlroy, the top-ranked player in the world consistently drives well over 300 yards. Supremely talented as he is, the Irishman's virtues when it comes to golf are very different from, say a yesteryears star like Seve Ballesteros who could barely hit a straight drive and yet excelled in creative escapes and imaginative shotmaking. Ballesteros, who famously remarked that 'my hands are my computer,'while dismissing modern tech, made the game 'fun' to watch.

Golf, the way it was intended to be played, is a complex sport of skill, both physical and mental. It's a sport that combines physical abilities, creativity—both in terms of shotmaking and strategy-and mental strength. Traditionally, power has been important: length off the tee has always given the long-hitters an advantage.

But that was tempered by the inherent need for finesse around the greens, and rewards for precision. In the modern age, Woods is possibly the only modern golfer who is as imaginative and creative as he is powerful. But the current stars of the game, are 'bomb and gouge,' artistes—hitting it as long as they can and then wedging it close to the pin.

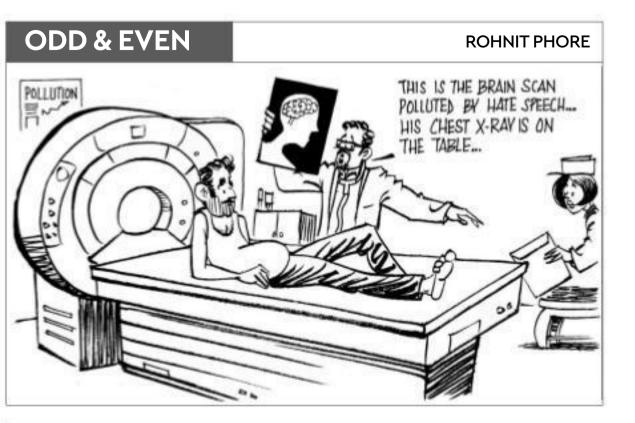

Watching their favourite players, most amateurs become equally skewed in their focus and their practice towards the long ball. Something not lost on equipment companies that release bigger and more forgiving drivers every year in a ploy to bait weekend golfers on a quest for bigger and more booming drives.

The fact that the ten-yard greenside bunker shot, or approach, counts as much as that 250-yard drive off the tee is conveniently ignored. If all you're seeing on television is pros bombing it 300 yards and hitting wedges into 500 yard par 4s then its unlikely that you'll be motivated to work on a deft touch around the greens. Who wants to spend hours in a bunker practicing shots, or little chips off the green when you can tee it up and go all ape on the ball?

And that works fine when you're on your home club where there's really no new strategy required and you know exactly where to hit the ball. Trouble arises on new courses where you're required to 'place' the ball—off the tee, and off the fairway—while avoiding hazards that aren't already mapped in your golfing brain. That's when the 'grip it and rip it', swing falls apart and fear takes over. Your muscles get tight and the ball goes precisely where you don't want it to go.

Without a doubt, the best way to get an accurate reflection of the merits of your swing (or lack of them) is to play courses you're unfamiliar with. That's when it hits you: this is a game of precision. Perhaps the best advice for amateurs came from PGA Tour player and Major-winner Geoff Ogilvy who remarked in an interview to the New York Times that amateur golfers love the driver because, "They think they're practicing to have nice scores, but they're really only practicing to have fun." Would you rather have a fun day with the driver and not such a great score? Or, would you rather not hit any blinding drives but walk off with a decent score? I know, what the answer to that conundrum is, for me at least. And I'm no smarter than the rest of us.

Economists have pointed out that private investment, private consumption and exports have stalled. There are ways and means to accelerate exports, stimulate private investment and encourage more consumption. As long as the government is in denial of the weaknesses and threats it cannot find the strengths and the opportunities

THERE ARE ECONOMISTS and economists. There are also bank economists. If you believe some economists, nothing is wrong with India's economy or its management and, even better, nothing can go wrong ever. If you believe bank economists, RBI is in heaven and all is well with India's economy (until the RBI drops a hint to the contrary). I wish they were as true as they are loyal.

On October 1, 2023, we stepped into the last half year of the present government that will complete 10 years on May 30, 2024. April and May 2024 will be a virtual holiday for governance. It is therefore a good time to review the state of the economy. In a developing country like India, the GDP growth rate is the one number, more than any other metric, that reflects the state of the economy. Let me therefore begin with the growth rate in the ten years of BJP's rule. According to NSO's figures, in the first nine years the average growth rate was 5.7%. Adding the growth rate projected by the government of 6.5% in 2023-24, the average for the ten years will be 5.8%. Compare this to the growth rates achieved under UPA-I and UPA-II. The average of the five years of UPA-I was 8.5% and the average of the ten years of UPA-I and UPA-II was 7.5%.

Some economists may dismiss the decline of 1.8% as inconsequential. That would be completely wrong.

The decline has grave implications for national security, infrastructure spending, investments, job creation, welfare measures, household consumption, savings, poverty reduction, and improvements in education and health.

Government in denial, economy in distress

Two top concerns

The two concerns uppermost in the minds of the people are price rise and unemployment. Thanks to rising prices, every family, except the rich — say, the top 10% — finds it difficult to balance the household budget. The All India Consumer Prices Index (New Series) that stood at 112 in 2013-14 rose to 174 in December 2022. Food inflation is close to 10%. The immediate consequence is a cut in household consumption. At every level of income, households are economising on expenditure or dipping into their savings. Net financial assets of households have plummeted to a low of 5.1%. FMCG companies have introduced smaller packages for the same price to retain brand loyalty. The reduced numbers in the sale of two wheelers is a good indicator of the impact of price rise on household consumption. The other top concern is unemployment. Contrary to claims, millions of jobs have not been created in the last 10 years and certainly not the promised 2 crore jobs a year (since explained as an election jumla). The data shows that in every year of the last 10 years, except one, the unemployment rate has been above 7%. The unemployment rate among graduates is 42% according to the State of Working India 2023 report. The unemployment rate among youth (15-24 years) stood at 23.22% in 2022. Most'employment'today is self-employment (57%). The proportion of regular wage employees has fallen from 24% to 21%.

CMIE data shows that the number of government jobs declined by 22% under the present government (during 2015-2023).

Reading tea leaves

The Ministry of Finance publishes a monthly review. The September 2023 Review released on October 23 speaks in code language: risks to the near term global outlook, persistent cost pressures, upward drift in inflation expectations, policy rates higher for longer, abrupt reassessment of liquidity and credit risks, adverse supply shocks in commodity markets and spike in energy prices. In plain English, the Review's sombre conclusion is that the economic outlook is gloomy, growth will slow down, prices will rise, interest rates will be higher, household consumption will be reduced, savings will decline and borrowings will increase.

An economist of a rating agency wrote, recently, "Bank credit growth remains strong at over 15%, with retail credit growth at over 18%." Impressive indeed, until one drills into the data and discovers that credit growth is driven by growth in personal loans (23%) and gold loans (22%). Credit growth to industry in August 2023 was just 6.1%. The average monthly income has fallen by 9.2% over the last four quarters (from ₹12,700 to ₹11,600) and the average daily wage for a rural casual labourer has fallen from ₹409 to ₹388. It is a fair inference that the growth in personal loans and gold loans was for consumption. Reading the tea leaves can be a hazardous exercise.

Three engines stalled

Economists have pointed out that the engine of government investment alone seems to be working while private investment, private consumption and exports have stalled. There are ways and means to accelerate exports, stimulate private investment and encourage more consumption. As long as the government is in denial of the weaknesses and threats it cannot find the strengths and the opportunities. It has been a hard autumn, the winter could be harsh and we can only hope that spring will bring cheer.

Dark shadows over Diwali

THE ONLY WAY to begin a column that appears on Diwali morning is to start by wishing all of you the very best for this most auspicious and beautiful of our festivals.

My personal wish today is that next year brings a Diwali that is less shadowed by war and death. I do not know about you but when I light the 'diyas' tonight and seek the blessings of the Goddess Lakshmi I will find it hard not to think about the horrors unfolding in Gaza. It is heartbreaking to see children dying for reasons they cannot understand, and horrifying to see people fleeing from homes that they may not return to because they may have been destroyed by bombs.

Having said this I would like to reiterate what I have said before in this column, that the reason why the people of Gaza are suffering is because of Hamas.

This would not be happening, and could stop quickly, if Hamas freed the Israeli hostages that it has now hidden in its dreadful network of tunnels for more than a month. Why do they not do this? And why are countries like Iran, Russia, China, and every Islamic country not putting pressure on Hamas to stop this evil war?

There is pressure on Israel from its allies and because these are democratic countries, there have been huge protests in London, New York, Paris, and Berlin in support of Palestine. This does not make Israel the villain of this horror story.

The villain remains Hamas and far too many people seem to have forgotten this.

For me, this Diwali is not the happiest for domestic reasons as well. Since today is when we celebrate the Goddess of Wealth it has worried me to see that in the past week there have been political leaders who appear to celebrate the survival of poverty.

Poor people and poverty are handy props in election season, because then politicians who have failed to deliver prosperity spend their time promising scraps from the high table to those living in poverty.

Chief Ministers, desperate for reelection, have been distributing charity in the name of welfare as if it was their personal money that they were spending.

Promises of monthly pocket money for women and promises of more quotas based on caste have been so recklessly made that in doing these things they have virtually admitted that India is still a very, very poor country.

The Prime Minister who often rails against freebies has joined the 'povertarian' club by promising that cheap food grain will continue to be supplied to 80 crore Indians for another five years. Are there 80 crore Indians too poor to buy food at market prices? And, if there are then we need to forget about that dream of becoming a developed country in the next decade.

When political leaders spend taxpayers' money on handing out charity, they fail to tell voters that if they were not spending money this way, there would be more money to spend on schools, hospitals, roads and creating real jobs. They fail to tell them that no country in the world has ever got rich from distributing largesse to poor people instead of helping them escape poverty.

Countries that are rich have invested wisely in prosperity and not poverty. If India is not yet counted among them, it is because of 'socialist'economic policies that made our unwise leaders squander money on giving the poor charity.

Socialism of this kind has proved to be a failure. But because most of our leaders have spent their formative years in socialist times, they remain stuck in ideas that should have died long ago.

As the only civilisation in the world that worships the Goddess of Wealth and Prosperity on our most important festival, we should instead celebrate the creation of wealth. This is something we have not learned to do because it is not just our political leaders but our 'intellectuals' who continue to cling to economic ideas that belong in the garbage bin. Perhaps our political leaders and thinkers will only discover they were wrong when we spend more decades distributing charity without getting any closer to helping our most desperate citizens escape the shackles of poverty. That is a truly gloomy thought, but it is a gloomy time. At a personal level I admit that I have been so depressed by events in the Middle East, and the low quality of the campaign promises being made in this election season that I have found it hard to enjoy Diwali festivities like I usually do. When I light my 'diyas' tonight and pay my obeisance to the Goddess I shall make a wish that by next week somehow the Israeli hostages have been miraculously freed.

And, that the bombing of Gaza miraculously ends and there can be the first glimmers of peace between Israel and Palestine. I will make this wish knowing in my heart that peace will only be possible if Hamas and other jihadi terrorist organisations are crushed once and for all.

Meanwhile may you have a wonderful Diwali and may the coming year bring prosperity and good fortune to your families, to our country and to the world. If things get better, I promise that next Diwali I will write a piece full of joy and sparkle. This year it has been too hard to do.

Is humankind ready for a giant, second leap?

A top scientist has proposed a new way to reconcile the two different ways that our clocks keep time. Meet — wait for it the leap minute

MATT RICHTEL

ELEGATIONS FROM AROUND the world will head to the World Radio Conference on November 20 in Dubai to discuss international treaties involving radio frequencies, satellite coordination and other tricky technical issues. These include the nagging problem of the clocks. For 50 years, the international community has carefully and precariously balanced two different ways of keeping time. One method, based on Earth's rotation, is as old as human timekeeping itself, an ancient and common-sense reliance on the position of the sun and stars. The other, more precise method coaxes a steady, reliable frequency from the changing state of cesium atoms and provides essential regularity for the digital devices that dominate our lives. The trouble is that the times on these clocks diverge.

The astronomical time, called Universal Time, or UT1, has tended to fall a few clicks behind the atomic one, called International Atomic Time, or TAI. So every few years since 1972, the two times have been synced by the insertion of leap seconds pausing the atomic clocks briefly to let the astronomic one catch up. This creates UTC, Coordinated Universal Time. But it's hard to forecast precisely when the leap second will be required, and this has created an intensifying headache for technology the world's timekeepers.

"Having to deal with leap seconds drives me crazy," said Judah Levine, head of the Network Synchronization Project in the Time and Frequency Division at the National Institute of Standards and Technology, or NIST, in Boulder, Colorado, where he is a leading thinker on coordinating the world's clocks. On the eve of the next international discussion, Dr Levine has written a paper that proposes a new solution: the leap minute. The idea is to sync the clocks less frequently, perhaps every half-century, essentially letting atomic time diverge from cosmos-based time for 60 seconds or even a tad longer, and basically forgetting about it in the meantime. "We all need to relax a little bit," Dr Levine said.

One world, two clocks

The troubles date to the early 1970s. with the introduction of atomic time. Until then, the world had largely relied on astronomical time. It seemed logical - the sun came up and there was day, then it went down and there was night and so forth, although there were minor irregularities caused by the slowing of Earth's rotation and other natural forces. These variations went largely unnoticed by humans. Not so much by machines. After atomic time's introduction, ASTRONOMICAL AND it became essential to a growing number of functions.

The introduction of the leap second in 1972 codified that a second would be introduced each time the two clocks diverged by more than 0.9 seconds. This had at least three aims: to keep time connected to the natural world and the tradition of astronomy; to suit digital technology; and to reconcile and synchronise the two clocks. Over the last 50 years, leap seconds have been used 27 times. Around the turn of this century, another problem arose, driven by a new set of stakeholders: big technology companies. The likes of Google, Amazon and Facebook developed their own methods for reconciling astronomical and atomic time, essentially bypassing the leap second. Meta, for instance, "smears" the leap second in millisecond increments across a 17-hour period, rather than leaping abruptly. "We made a mess of time all over the world," said Patrizia Tavella, director of the Time Department at the International Bureau of Weights and Measures in Paris. Dr Levine, with his leap-minute solution, is highly regarded among time-keeping scientists, said Demetrios Mat-GOOGLE, sakis, a former director of the AMAZON AND US Naval Observatory's FACEBOOK Time Service Department.

DEVELOPED THEIR OWN The Vatican & METHODS FOR RECONCILING the Russians

At one point in the last year, Dr Tavella spoke to the Rev Paul Gabor, an astrophysicist and the vice director of the Vatican Observatory Research Group in Tucson, Ariz, about the leap second. His concern, she said, was that "eliminating the idea could create some uneasiness, as humans feel connected and want to remain connected to the natural world." Also: "Men look to the sky and count days; this is something 'unspoken' but deep in the heart of men." Other timekeepers and diplomats felt that losing the leap second would disconnect official time and eventually lead to the pre-eminence of the accurate but lab-created atomic clocks.

Among the fiercest opponents over the years has been the British government, which controlled Greenwich Mean Time (what is now Coordinated Universal Time), an astronomical clock that is determined by averaging the position of the sun over the year. Dr Levine said, the persistence of Daylight Saving Time appears to be an admission that people are comfortable "with changing the connection between time and everyday astronomy."

Over the last decade, the growing challenges of implementing the leap second have prompted a willingness to change the current system. Last November the member states of the International Bureau of Weights and Measures declared they were ready to explore alternatives to the leap second. No proposal was adopted, but the ground was laid for considering options, like scrapping the leap second. There were holdouts, notably the Russians, who have argued vigorously if mysteriously for keeping the leap second. The presumption is that the Russian Glonass satellite system is built to account for leap seconds and that altering the current timekeeping methodology could have military implications.

For now, the leap minute proposal has just begun to circulate as part of a draft paper. Its formal publication may well come after Dubai, although word of it will have spread. -NYT

Here's a hairy truth about your sense of touch

Researchers showed that cells in your hair follicles release important chemical messengers in response to gentle touches to your skin

VERONIQUE GREENWOOD

WHEN SOMEONE BRUSHES a hand across your skin, it's like a breeze blowing through a forest of countless small hairs. Nerves that surround your hair follicles detect that contact, and very far away in your brain, other cells fire. Some of the neurons responding to light contact might make you shiver and give you goose bumps. Some might tell you to move away. Or they might tell you to move closer.

Scientists who study the sense of touch have explored which cells bear these messages, and they have made an intriguing discovery: Follicle cells triggered by hair movements release the neurotransmitters histamine and serotonin, chemical messengers linked to biological phenomena as varied as inflammation, muscle contraction and mood changes. The observation in the journal Science Advances, lays the groundwork for tracing how gentle touch makes us feel the way it does.

Studying hair follicles is challenging, because they begin to decay soon after being removed from the body, said Claire Higgins, a bioengineering professor at Imperial College London and an author of the study. So she and her colleagues went to a hair transplant clinic. There, they were able to look at freshly harvested follicles, which they gently prodded with a very small rod to simulate touch. The scientists knew from work done by other groups that the neurons in the skin surrounding hair follicles are capable of sensing movement. "When you brush your hair, you feel it because the sensory neurons are directly being stimulated," Dr Higgins said. But they were curious whether the cells of the follicle itself – the tube from which a hair sprouts – could be contributing to some of the feelings associated with more gentle touch. Not all of the follicle cells had movement sensors, but some

did. The researchers identified these and watched them carefully as the rod touched them. "We found that when we stimulated our hair follicle cells, they actually released mood-regulating neurotransmitters serotonin and histamine," Dr Higgins said.

Blocking the receptors for these neurotransmitters on nearby neurons meant that they no longer fired when the hair was stroked, confirming the link between the follicle cells and the neurons' response. Just because these neurotransmitters are associated with mood in the brain does not mean that they are linked to emotion elsewhere in the body, Dr Higgins said. They are messengers, and the nature of the message they carry depends on which cells they are stimulating.

But she points to research by Francis McGlone, a neuroscientist at Liverpool John Moores University in England who has studied the rewarding feelings we get from touch. He and his colleagues have identified nerves in the skin that respond to gentle touch, generating that warm glow we get from human contact.

Were the neurotransmitters being released by follicle cells in this study stimulating those nerves specifically? No one knows, but Dr Higgins hopes future work will illuminate the identity of the cells the neurotransmitters target. She is curious how increasing levels of serotonin or histamine in the skin might change what happens in the brain, at the other end of the transmission. In the tiny sheath of cells containing each hair, there may be answers to questions about something as fundamental as human connection. "The follicle never ceases to amaze me," she said.

. An application was filed against M/s DION GLOBAL SOLUTIONS LIMITED under Section 9 of Insolvency and Bankruptcy Code, 2016 read with Rule 6 of the Insolvency and Bankruptcy (Application to Adjudicating Authority) Rules, 2016 before the Hon'ble NCLT Delhi with a prayer to commence the Corporate Insolvency Resolution Process (CIRP). The said application for initiation of Corporate Insolvency Resolution Process (CIRP) has been admitted by Hon'ble National Company Law Tribunal (NCLT), New Delhi Bench, (Hon'ble NCLT/Hon'ble Adjudicating Authority) vide its order dated 18.08.2020. Under the IBC proceedings, the power of the Board were suspended with effect from 18.08.2020. The NCLT order also provided for a moratorium with effect from 18.08.2020 till the completion of the Corporate Insolvency Resolution process (CIRP) or until it approves the resolution plan under section 31(1) or passes an order for liquidation of the company under section 33, whichever is earlier. Currently, the CIRP process in respect of the company is in progress. In terms of Section 20 of Insolvency code, the management and operations of the Company are being managed by Interim Resolution Professional (IRP) / Resolution Professional (RP).

All the executive directors of the Company, CFO and Company Secretary had resigned from the Company before the commencement of CIRP. In the absence of these concerned officials, who are primarily responsible for the book closure process and financial reporting, the Resolution Professional has got these financial statements prepared through present employees of the Company and hired consultants. These financial statements have been taken on record by the Resolution Professional while exercising the powers of the Board of Directors of the Company, which have been conferred upon him in terms of the provisions of Section 17 of the Code. Resolution Professional has taken on record these financial statements in good faith solely for the purpose of compliance and discharging his duty under the Code.

. As per regulation 33(3)(d) of the SEBI (LODR), 2015, if the listed entity has subsidiaries, it shall, while submitting annual audited standalone financial results also submit annual audited consolidated financial results along with the audit report. It is to be noted that Resolution Professional in his powers shall have control over management of the corporate debtor only and not on its subsidiary, associate, or any other group companies. In order to comply with the regulation, adequate efforts were made to seek financials for the subsidiary companies but these were not made available. Hence only standalone audited financial results are submitted with the stock exchange.

5. As per Regulation 33(2)(b) of the SEBI (Listing Obligations and Disclosure Requirements) Regulations, 2015, the Financial Results of a Company submitted to the Stock Exchange shall be signed by the Chairperson or Managing Director or Whole Time Director or in absence of all of them, it shall be signed by any of the Director of the Company who is fully authorised by the Board of Directors to sign the Financial Results. In view of the ongoing Corporate Insolvency Resolution Process commenced from 18th August 2020, powers of the Board of Directors have been suspended and these powers are now vested with the Resolution Professional of the Company vide the order passed by Hon'ble NCLT, New Delhi on 18.08.2020. Accordingly, the above Financial Results of the Company for the quarter ended 31 December 2022 were taken on record and authorised for issue to concerned authorities by the Resolution Professional. A Resolution Plan received during the Corporate Insolvency Resolution Process has been approved by the Committee of Creditors and the same has been submitted to the Hon'ble NCLT. The matter is still pending with Hon'ble NCLT for final approval. . As the Company is into Software Product and Services business, license fee revenue may vary from guarter to guarter.

the only reportable business segment as per Ind AS 108 on 'Operating Segments' prescribed under Section 133 of the Companies Act, 2013.

Diwali is about celebrating life together in a moment

In some parts of India, the arrival of Diwali marks the beginning of a new year. In many parts, Diwali is celebrated for five consecutive days

NE of the grandest of Hindu festivals, Diwali marks the return of Lord Rama after 14 years of exile and his victory over the demon king Ravana. It is also the time when Goddess Lakshmi is believed to have come into her own, blessing the world with peace and prosperity. Celebrated in the Hindu month of Kartikamasam (usually between October and November), the festival is one of the most popular and widely celebrated across the globe. Ceremonially, it is about repairing the old and beginning anew. It is about celebrating life together in a moment, a participatory effort of sharing with and becoming part of humanity.

So the preparations begin with a symbolic cleansing of our souls and cleaning up our homes and workplaces. Throughout the country, houses, buildings, shops and temples are thoroughly cleaned, whitewashed and decorated with flowers and lighting. This is also the time for a cultural efflorescence as everybody tries their hand at a rangoli in front of their doorway to welcome Goddess Laxmi. In fact, the festival is part of a sub-continental culture of being one with the community. That's why people don their best clothes and exchange greetings, gifts and sweets. It is a public holiday in countries such as Nepal, Sri Lanka, Singapore, Malaysia, Mauritius, Fiji, Surinam, Guyana, Trinidad and Tobago. It is also a school holiday in many states of the United States with a large Hindu population.

In some parts of India, the arrival of Diwali marks the beginning of a new year. In many parts, Diwali is celebrated for five consecutive days. On Day One, people clean their homes and shop for gold or kitchenware to usher in good fortune. On Day Two, people give in to their creative side, decorate their homes with clay lamps and create design patterns called rangoli on the floor using flowers, coloured powder, rice paste or sand. On Day Three, the main day of the festival, families gather together for Lakshmi puja, followed by mouth-watering feasts and fireworks. On Day Four, friends and relatives visit with gifts and best wishes for the season. On Day Five, brothers visit their married sisters, who welcome them with a lavish meal.

Clearly, it is a season of indulgence, especially when it comes to food. Some of the traditional recipes include gulab jamun, sooji halwa, rice kheer, moong dal ka halwa, gajar ka halwa, rasgulla, gujjias, desi ghee laddoos and samosas among others. Not to mention that these luscious delicacies are a quintessential part of our culinary culture and are hot favourites when it comes to celebrating Diwali.

As the festive fervour picks up pace, the demand for shopping festive essentials increases. The Indian business community and corporate majors know this and come out with a whole range of offers, deals and discounts on various categories, such as electronics, home appliances, automobiles and many more. Even though COVID-19 has dented the buying potential of people, some recovery means that demand is slowly picking up and people are ready to spend on their long-postponed must-buy list.

BIG C DIWALI DHAMAKA

More offers at low prices compared to online or the past 21 years, BIG C has been creating a revolution in retail mobile space with over 250 stores in Telangana and AP. "On the occasion of Diwali, BIG C is offering Dhamaka offers to its customers," says CMD M. Balu Chowdary.

In this Dhamaka offer, there is instant cash back of up to Rs. 10,000 on purchase of mobiles along with a guaranteed gift worth up to Rs. 4,000. There is more for Diwali like Smart Watch Offer, Loyalty Points Offer, Smart TV Offer, 1+1 Extended warranty offer, and much more.

There is a facility to buy mobile, smart tv, laptop, and air conditioner without any interest or down payment throug ATM cards. Balu adds, "That it is the tradition of BIG C to bring great offers to customers on festivals and special occasions. This Diwali, also, BIG C, is offering many benefits and offers." He further added that customers must use this opportunity to celebrate Diwali in a great fashion.

INDIA SUITED TO DEFEND TOTALS WITH APLOMB

Why India should bowl first against Netherlands

VENKATA KRISHNA Bengaluru, November 11

IRONY IS BLOWING in the Bangalore winds. Before the start of the World Cup, it had seemed that India were better off chasing, trusting their batsmen. The bowling form wasn't exactly clear: there was hesitancy about using Mohammad Shami, concerns about Jasprit Bumrah's touch and endurance after return from injury, the insistence on using Shardul Thakur for his batting ability, and whether Hardik Pandya will last and be effective across 10 overs in Indian conditions.

But now, a wondrous rolereversal has occurred. Such has been Indian seamers' venom under lights, and spinners Ravindra Jadeja and Kuldeep Yadav's skills, that now India look a side suited to defend totals with aplomb. And we are now at a stage, just before the semi-final, talking about how they should test their chasing skills and bowling upfront effectiveness in the game against Netherlands on Sunday.

When Mohammad Shami came in for the injured Pandya in the match against New Zealand, he immediately struck rhythm, grabbing a five-for in the game India bowled first. From then on, they have been batting first. India are averaging 8.63 with the ball while bowling second. Bowling first, they average 25.95, which although is exceptional, is worth testing again before the knockouts.

Be it in 2015 or 2019, India finished as the top placed team in the group stages, only to bow out in the semi-finals. As they prepare for another semi-final against an opponent that has caused them trouble in bigticket events, there is still one more box India would be happy to tick-off — to bowl first and be prepared for all possibilities against New Zealand.

Rahul Dravid didn't want to be seen fussing too much about the scenario. "I think in the first five we batted first and then we had to chase in the last three. So, we've actually done both things and we're pretty comfortable with both things. So, I'm not too worried about it," he said on the eve of the Netherlands game.

While India have bowled out opponents in each of the three matches they have bowled under lights, they have done so on three out of the five innings

With no sixth bowling option, India have zero room for any of their five bowlers to have an off-day. Which is why should India win the toss against Netherlands on Sunday, they should break the trend here in Bengaluru and bowl first, just to get some confidence behind them. If Netherlands win the

CRICKET WORLD CUP

INDIA 2023

toss, they might anyway ask India to bowl first, to avoid chasing under lights.

Dravid said the team will be comfortable chasing or defending. "We'll have a look at the wicket and see what we need to do. There are arguments both ways of batting first, putting up a score and hopefully setting the tone that way. And there's also an argument of chasing as well, which means that you probably have to bowl in the sun. But the toss is not in our hands, it's not going to be in our hands in the semi-finals. And I think we are comfortable both ways. We will have a look at the wicket today and come tomorrow and have a look at the wicket as well. And then, whatever call Rohit makes, we will go with it," he said.

SZA leads all artists at 2024 Grammy nominations

ASSOCIATED PRESS Los Angeles, November 11

KILLING HER EX? That's a bad idea.Writing Kill Bill and releasing her critically acclaimed sophomore album SOS earlier this year? That was a great one. SZA is the lead contender for the 66th Grammy Awards, with nine nominations announced.

Kill Bill, her revenge anthem cloaked in an R&B ballad, earned her nods for record of the year, song of the year, and best R&B performance. SOS is also up for album of the year and best progressive R&B album. The 2024 ceremony will mark the second time SZA has been nominated for record, album, and song of the year in the same year.

And just like at the box office, Barbie will be seen — and heard — at the Grammys. Music from the hit film's soundtrack earned 11 nominations, including nabbing four of the five slots in the visual media song category.

If there is an overall trend in the 2024 nominations, it's that female acts outperformed their male counterparts. The majority of leading nominees are women and include superstars like Taylor Swift, Billie Eilish, Miley Cyrus and Olivia Rodrigo. In both the record and album of the year categories, the only man represented is Jon Batiste.

for best traditional R&B performance (Love Language), best R&B song (Snooze), best melodic rap performance (Low), and best pop duo/group performance (Ghost in the Machine). The last features Phoebe Bridgers, who alongside Victoria Monet boasts the second-most nominations at seven.

Beatlemania is back as Now And Then tops charts

Paul McCartney (L) and Ringo Starr at the taping of 'The Night That Changed America: A Grammy Salute To The Beatles', in 2014

REUTERS

London, November 11

THE BEATLES RETURNED to the top of the UK music charts, with the record-breaking track Now And Then, making history as the act with the longest gap between its first and last No 1 single. Billed as the last Beatles song, Now And Then features the voice of late member John SZA, of course, leads the Lennon and was developed charge, picking up nominations using artificial intelligence. It also features parts recorded by surviving members Paul McCartney and Ringo Starr as well as the late George Harrison.

The group's 18th UK No 1 hit, it brings The Beatles back to the top of the Official Singles Chart 60 years after the group's first No 1 single From Me to You. The feat also extends The Beat-les'record as the British act with the most UKNo 1 singles in official charts history. "It's mind boggling. It's blown my socks off," McCartney said in a statement."It's also a very emotional moment for me. I love it!"

The song is the fastest-selling single of the year to date in Britain with 48,600 physical and download sales based on the its first seven days, the Official Charts Company said. It is also the fastest-selling vinyl single of the century so far in Britain with more than 19,400 copies sold on vinyl, and the most-streamed Beatles track in one week, with 5.03 million streams, it added. The group is also the act with the longest gap between No 1 singles — 54 years — and the oldest band to score a UK No 1 single, the Official Charts Company said. McCartney is 81 while Starr is 83.

"Beatlemania has returned this week," Official Charts Company chief executive officer Martin Talbot said. "The return of John, Paul, George and Ringo with the last ever Beatles single... has cemented their legend by breaking a catalogue of records — and in doing so underlined the extraordinary scope of their enduring appeal, across all the generations."
